Introduction to EFN

Environmentalists For Nuclear Energy (Canada) Inc. (EFN-CANADA) is a Canadian federally incorporated not-for-profit organization which provides complete and straightforward information about energy and the environment; makes known the advantages of nuclear energy, and especially the environmental benefits; brings together persons favouring the use of nuclear energy for peaceful purposes with respect for the environment and with proper management of nuclear waste.

EFN-CANADA is an independent organization which works in cooperation with EFN-International and similar organizations in other regions of the world forming an international network of Environmentalists For Nuclear Energy.

EFN-CANADA seeks to unite people who feel concerned about the future of our planet, want to keep it clean and to protect nature.

History of EFN

EFN was created in 1996 after the publication of Bruno Comby's book Environmentalists For Nuclear Energy. EFN grew rapidly, currently has over 8,000 members, supporters and local correspondents in more than 56 countries around the world, to promote clean and safe applications of nuclear energy, for a better and cleaner planet.

In 2006 some Canadian citizens and environmentalists decided to create EFN-CANADA to inform the Canadian public. The founding President of EFN-CANADA is Rodney Anderson. The Honorary Chairman of EFN-CANADA is Dr Patrick Moore.

The point of view of EFN

To stop polluting our atmosphere, prevent global warming, and replace dwindling supplies of oil, EFN-CANADA promotes energy conservation, renewable energies, sustainable lifestyles, and the use of clean nuclear energy.

EFN-CANADA considers that environmental opposition to nuclear energy is a major mistake. If it is well designed, well built and well managed, nuclear energy is safe and clean, does not emit polluting gases into the atmosphere, uses few construction materials per kWh (compared to solar and wind energy), produces very little waste (which is confined and can be recycled), and produces almost no carbon dioxide, therefore does not contribute to the greenhouse effect.

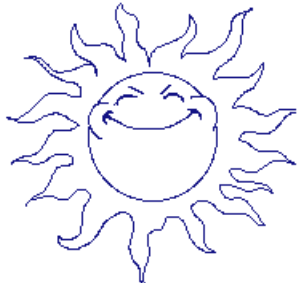

EFN-CANADA works at informing the public of the environmental benefits of nuclear energy, the cleanest energy resource massively available to humanity.
